Autodesk Dreamweaver is a web page editor based on the C++ AutoLISP API. It was released in early 2008 and won the 2009, 2008, 2007 and 2006 Macworld Editors' Choice awards. AutoLISP also features a built-in development environment for JavaScript and Ajax, allowing developers to build add-on plugins for Dreamweaver. AutoLISP was released in late 2009 with AutoCAD 2008. It is built into AutoCAD, unlike previous Autodesk drawing editors such as AutoCAD Architecture, AutoCAD Electrical and Autodesk Architectural Desktop. AutoLISP features include: vector object creation and modification, mapping, and importing and exporting drawing information. AutoLISP was integrated with Autodesk Inventor in early 2010. AutoLISP is the language of choice for the Cadalyst Plug-in, a free plug-in that takes AutoCAD drawings and creates web-pages and PDFs with your own content. The Cadalyst Plug-in allows you to incorporate your own drawing-related Web content, such as text, images, table of contents, AutoCAD files and more. AutoLISP was integrated with Inventor in early 2012. With.NET support in the legacy AutoCAD applications, the new X++ development environment, and the release of AutoLISP in 2009, support was added in 2010. A GUI builder for this environment was released for AutoCAD 2010, and X++ 2010, which integrated components of X++ development environments in AutoCAD 2010. The X++ design tools were used to create Autodesk Exchange App add-ons such as: AutoCAD Architectural Network, AutoCAD Civil 3D, AutoCAD Electrical Network, AutoCAD Electrical Network Commercial, AutoCAD Mechanical Network, and AutoCAD Architecture Network. Many tools used in Autodesk CAD applications use the XML based API. Originally it was the primary API, but now the primary API is.NET, and all major tools are based on this new API, which in turn was based on ObjectARX. AutoLISP AutoLISP, released in 2009, is the language of choice for the Autodesk Cadalyst Plug-in, a free plug-in that takes AutoCAD drawings and creates web-pages and PDFs with your own content. Some of it is stuff you can learn. But lots of it is stuff you have to discover for yourself. And since each of us has a unique set of habits of mind, what will work for one of you might be too odd to work for another. And some of it is actually illegal. Last week, the left took a pretty big victory in the culture war. The Supreme Court ruled that the government could no longer block people from praying or posting religious symbols on their property. They were right. It's against the law to tell people that they can't act like Christians. This week, we get to see what happens when the left isn't right. Last week, liberal clergy leaders mounted a high-profile campaign demanding that students in the Southern Baptist Convention remove the Confederate flag from its convention in Birmingham, Alabama, which is hosting this year's annual SBC gathering. Their demand, which was spurred in part by the massacre of nine innocent women and children in a Charleston, South Carolina, church earlier this year, was ignored. Now, several clergy leaders have resigned from the Southern Baptist Convention in protest. These anti-flag zealots sound a lot like the anti-gun zealots of the '60s. They claim to be "pro-life" but are actually against the livelihoods of the people they claim to be fighting for. And this week, to add insult to
