Wikipedia Bosnia and Herzegovina, better known as Bosnia, was formed from two ethnic territories: the Bosnians who settled in the territory of the former Roman empire after the First Crusade, and the Croats who came here at the end of the XIV century from Zeta (Southern Dalmatia). The Croatian-Muslim compromise movement was persecuted by the Bosnian authorities. As a result of the Croatian operations "Storm" and "Buran" in 1991, the majority of Bosnian Muslims was killed or expelled from the country. In 1992, a wave of Croatian aggression served as a pretext for the adoption by the Bosnian leadership of the decision on independence, in 1994 allowing the creation of an independent state of the Republika Srpska. In 2000 on throne of Bosnia was elected Saracoglu. In this regard, an interesting frame ... A small photo of B. Sarkis, A. Kryukov. There is no such city in the city - Rashkov. Summer, 1980 I came there from Alkanavtika, and was very glad to visit the old city. Belgrade Cetinje-no not a city, just an old fortress. Where in Cetinje was and is there a city? In my opinion, it was not now there is no. This is how they built it under the Soviet regime, and it was a military town, and it still exists. This not the Tsetinsky Monastery, this is a military-patriotic club, everything is there: training grounds, shooting ranges, quarter of the proskinitarii (I can still hear them singing, and I see them - no, I don't remember). At the checkpoint approached the colonel in an unbuttoned tunic, he was in a rather casual manner, we and said: "Excuse me, but there is a military facility here, what about your uniform? We need weapons." He looked at us with resentment, we laughed. Some of the adults even frolicked like a child, and our reaction even seemed to surprise him. Then we were told that this was Colonel Vasich. He was in his suit, but changed into civilian clothes, only the harness remained. When we sat down table, he listened to us, then he said that we are not in Yugoslavia, but in Russia, and what we see t
