Q: IIS reverse proxy not finding app pool

I have a reverse proxy setup between two servers which is working fine. The reverse proxy is in front of an IIS 7 web server which has an app pool that a site is hosted under. We use Apache for the reverse proxy. When accessing the site via the reverse proxy I get this error: HTTP Error 502.5 - Bad Gateway An application error occurred on the server. The current custom error settings for this request prevent the application from displaying detailed error information. For more information about custom errors, click here. When trying to access the site directly it works fine. This is the web.config for the site.

Useful Links: was a bit of a slow morning. I was up at about 6am and started a bit early for a lazy person's day. I had a very good dinner the night before and was able to get the whole family together for breakfast at the table. The boys were both up and ready when I left the house. I took a quick drive with the girls and we were on our way back to school. The boys were starting off in their new stomping grounds on the playground.

Q: What is the difference between the text string when using the two functions to call the same function in Python? In Python 2.7.6, why is this code fragment failing?

>>> def a(self): ... return self.__dict__['b'].upper() ... >>> class a(object): ... def __init__(self, b): ... self.b = b ... def __repr__(self): ... return "" % (self.b,) ... def __getattr__(self, attr): ... return a(self.b) ... def a(self): ... return self.__dict__['b'].upper() ... >>> c = a(1) >>> c 1d6a3396d6
