The RecyCom program contains the following two features: 1) Recycling directories: With this feature, RecyCom allows you to recycle a directory tree simply by moving it to the Recycle Bin. It is very simple to use, and it has few options, but RecyCom does the work right for you. This feature is very handy, but it does its job in a very simplistic way. 2) Recycling all files: With this feature, RecyCom allows you to recycle all the files contained in a directory tree simply by moving them to the Recycle Bin. It is very simple to use, and it has few options, but RecyCom does the work right for you. This feature is very handy, but it does its job in a very simplistic way. RecyCom Features: * Path/File Paths: RecyCom accepts path and file paths. It also accepts a directory name as an input. * Recycle Bin: RecyCom recycles any directory, and it enables you to move the files to the Recycle Bin. * Files Count: RecyCom can count the number of files in the directory tree. This can be useful in some applications, such as software that does not allow the recycling of a directory tree if there are more than a certain number of files. * Exclude Files: RecyCom can exclude the directories in which you want to recycle their contents, thus saving you from having to move your files manually in the Recycle Bin. * F/R folders: RecyCom can recycle the folders in the paths you enter, recursively. This is very useful when recycling a directory tree. * Pattern Check: RecyCom can check whether there is a certain file pattern in a directory tree. It is very easy to use, just type a pattern in the box, and the pattern is checked. * Deep Search: RecyCom can search files deep in the directory tree, up to a certain depth. If the depth is zero, it will search in the directory tree itself. * Search Files: RecyCom can search for files containing a certain pattern. For this purpose, you can type the exact text to be searched for. * Recycle Bin Options: You can select the recycle bin folder for the files you want to recycle, and you can also check if you want to delete the files when recycling them. * F/R subfolders: RecyCom

Most time, hard disks have a drive allocated to them that is pre-formatted in a certain way and is intended to store a certain type of data. This drive is known as a drive partition. Drive partitions are usually hidden and are there simply for a purpose. But they can be used to help organise hard disks and to hide your data more effectively. This article aims to help you to find your Windows 7 partitions and to understand them. 2. Open My Computer. 3. Now find the drive whose partition you want to find, right click on it and click Explore. 4. Find the partition, choose it and then click Properties. 5. Click the File System tab and see the contents of the partition. 8. These information are all that we need to configure the partition. The Windows 7 'lost' partition is a second hard disk. It is necessary to specify to the system which drive letter to assign to it. We are going to name it (D:) so we'll type (D:) and press Enter. 9. Now we must decide what the partition should be used for. To do that, we'll click the Use this space and click Define. 11. The partition is now an empty partition. If you click OK, it will be deleted. So click OK to confirm you want to delete it. If you prefer to keep it, click Cancel. In the last article we created a partition as a second disk. Now we are going to show you how to convert it to a full disk. We will begin with creating a new partition. How to make a partition a full disk While creating a partition for a drive, we had to have a drive of a certain size. But a disk can have a different size. It can be bigger or smaller than the amount of space that we have allocated to it. This was done so that you can use a disk that is larger than it's size. But we still have a partition. If we change the size of a partition, what will happen is that the disk will be "resized" to the new partition size. So what we have to do now is change the disk size to the new partition size. This is done by dragging the cursor to the left of the disk and it will resize the partition as a result. How to change the size of a partition 1. Open 1d6a3396d6
