Overview: IT Support has been an essential element of every organizational structure for many years now. The basic functionality of this supportive role is pretty much standardized; if something happens to your computer, there is a strong chance the organization will have someone to help you as soon as possible. But, as essential as they are in a lot of offices, IT staff do tend to be quite often ignored. And, quite often, you may find that when some of your colleagues have a problem, IT has no idea why. In that case, there is no substitute for a team of low-priced IT admins. With the help of this AI-powered IT support app, your IT department can be turned into a personal assistant for your entire staff. It even has an integrated Knowledge Base, allowing the IT to answer the majority of general IT questions your employees might have. IT Support is very much similar to Google Assistant, bringing you through various routines, such as support for the cloud, scanners, training, and more. The fact that IT Support is powered by artificial intelligence also means that its smart enough to respond to specific queries in a specialized way, such as speaking to you as if your friend, rather than a computer.
