Recently, both of my boys have had to have some rough and tumble play! Having them outside is a great time for everyone. We went to the beach one afternoon for a few hours of fun and were able to collect some sea glass and this little crab. He was all curled up on his back, and when I picked him up, he slowly turned and came to life. He was sticking his claws up in the air, and waving his pinchers around. I set him on the side of the boat and he just kept cruising around. We were on the water for a few hours, and as I was walking him back to the house, he decided that he wasn't quite done exploring just yet.

He continued to walk and I was behind him. I thought I spotted a little squid next to him, but when I picked him up, he wasn't here anymore! I found him at the end of the dock, and out on the ocean. He was not happy! It was quite an adventure trying to keep up with him! I think we definitely found a new favorite spot to spend time at in our boat. Who needs a beach when you have the open ocean just steps away? The best part? I found this little beauty in the driftwood as he was sitting at the bottom of the dock. I love his little face! And, it's just so clean and green and clear - the perfect day on the water! Hi! Thanks for stopping by and saying hello. I'm Celia.
