We have made the Gantt chart template able to print in different formats (e.g. printer, notebook, A4), so you can print the chart and refer to it in a convenient way, which makes it easier to handle. Color assignments and Gantt chart The Gantt chart template is very versatile and offers you an extensive range of options. The color assignments have been grouped in such a way that they are intuitive to use. The start date is represented by the blue-colored background and the end date by the yellow-colored background. The task data of each row are presented in red, green and blue color, so you can immediately spot task delays and overbooking in a visual way. You can control the project status by changing the background color. When the start date and the end date are far apart, the task data takes longer and the color gets darker, which helps you to evaluate your project. The tool includes the possibility to split tasks by status or resource. You can define the following task statuses: Open – tasks that are open (not assigned to any resource or any project milestone) Assigned – tasks that are assigned to a single resource and project milestone Started – tasks that are started (i.e. time interval is defined and resource is assigned) Completed – tasks that are completed (i.e. time interval is defined and resource is assigned) If you change the project status, the chart will automatically change accordingly. Print and export The Gantt chart can be easily exported in several formats and printed.
