With SoftXpand Duo, you can make your own customized Windows environment, and enable two or more users to run multiple Windows consoles on your system. You can easily set up accounts for multiple users, and even set different privileges for them, as well as whether to display the splash screen and change the desktop wallpaper. This intuitive software supports setting up up to 16 customized Windows consoles on your desktop simultaneously. Users can log in to their own customized computers by selecting their own profiles from the windows login screen. You can run multiple windows simultaneously on each user's desktop. Even users who don't have any technical knowledge can easily set up and manage different users' profiles in SoftXpand Duo. You will find a user and group settings dialog in SoftXpand Duo, from which you can edit personal and group-wide settings, such as user names, group names, screen size, desktops, workspace, files, printers, browser, download folder, and more. You can assign different profiles to each user, select the desktop themes you want, and select background image and wallpaper of each desktop. Features: Complete separation for multiple users Create different users on the PC with different profiles, including a user name, group name, desktop and workspace size, as well as different file settings, menu items, and system icons. Provide each user with his own working environment as specified by the user-defined profiles. You can even set different privileges for users so that they can only access specific features. The software also allows for setting different desktop themes, background image and wallpaper for each user. Configure each user's system icons and user interface Along with editing a user's settings, you can also configure each user's system icons and user interface. You can get rid of the welcome message that pops up when users first log in to the system, and remove the other icons that appear on the log in screen. You can even choose to completely remove the log in screen. You can also choose to hide the task bar, maximize all screen windows, get rid of the system tray on the bottom left side of the screen, move applications to the Task Bar, and set the position of the system icons. Multi-language support SoftXpand Duo works in both English and Chinese, and is available in 19 other languages. The software installs all necessary components from the internet, so you don't have to purchase any additional or bulky software. It is easy to use this software. Soft

A small dam, which was built in 1952 for irrigation, is adjacent to the pit mud facility. The dam and pond are managed by the North Carolina Environmental Management Commission (NCEMC). Since the late 1990s, the pond and outfall pipe discharging to the pond have been gradually covered with a layer of coarse gravel because the volume of pond effluent was greater than the capacity of the discharge pipe, which was located on the pond surface. The old site water sampling well (sampling permission was granted in 1986) is located less than 1 km from the outfall pipe. Also, the old site water sampling well and the current site water sampling well are located along the same length of stream, called "Curtain Creek," about 2 km downstream from the pond, but the water flows in opposite directions. The stream is in a floodplain, and the stream, pond, and outfall pipe have a natural tree lined riparian zone. In addition to the wells, three other water sampling wells were constructed at the site to monitor the ground water. One of them was located on the far bank of the creek, 0.5 km upstream from the outfall pipe; the other two were constructed from bedrock a few feet from the outfall pipe near the pond. These latter two wells have been installed to monitor the effectiveness of the outfall pipe, which discharge to the pond, at retaining sediment in the flow. In 2008, the ponds became the first sites to be selected in the new N.C. Rivers & Waterways Management program administered by the NCEMC, which was formed in 2007
