Gongzhufenghu Gongzhufenghu () is a cave located in the Mount Mogao area of Dunhuang, Gansu, China. It is roughly 130 meters long, which makes it one of the largest such caves in China. The cave is highly decorated and it is decorated with several cave paintings. The paintings depict a variety of animals and people. Some paintings, such as the "Giant Lizard" and the "Pig-faced Snake" are very large. They are also known as "Divine Dragons" because of their rich decorations. The first Westerner to enter the cave was the famous English explorer Aurel Stein in 1909.

I didn't think I would write this. But I have to admit, I'm enjoying it. I have always been fascinated by the way in which fictional characters are created. Fictional characters can be seen as "creatures of the imagination", but are they not really the creation of a person? If you ask my friend, he would tell you that I love creating fictional characters. I really enjoy it. But, if you asked him, he would probably say that I am also weirdly obsessed with them. Why is this? Well, I believe that people create fictional characters to be "someone else". For example, my friend loves playing games. He has created a fictional character in the form of a character name, "Paul". This is his "alter ego". Paul is not himself. He is someone else. And, he has created many other fictitious characters. These are the characters that he is often seen playing with in the games. They are not himself. He is someone else. Paul says that he wants to be someone else when he is playing with these characters. They become part of him. They have become his friends. And, sometimes, his "enemies". But, that is how many people create fictional characters in their imagination. Why are they like this? I really don't know. But, I do know this... People create these characters to be someone else. They are part of them. They are often their friends. And, occasionally, their enemies. Which is why, when people tell me that I am obsessed with my fictional characters, I have to take it with a pinch of salt. Because, I am creating a character. So, it is not only possible that I could be creating a character that resembles me. But, I am not necessarily doing it with that intention. In fact, I don't even think I know. But, I do know this...
