Giant craniopharyngiomas: clinical and histopathological features in a series of 10 cases. Craniopharyngiomas are relatively rare benign tumours arising from the sellar and suprasellar region. Diagnosis is challenging because of their varied presentation. Although they rarely extend beyond the cavernous sinus, they can be locally invasive and have a propensity for recurrence. Giant craniopharyngiomas (gCPCs) are defined as tumours with a maximal dimension of over 6 cm and constitute a relatively rare entity with little literature. The present study aims to describe clinical presentation, radiological and histopathological characteristics of gCPCs. A retrospective analysis of 10 cases of gCPCs treated at our institution over the past 10 years was conducted. The mean age at diagnosis was 48.2 years. The mean maximal dimension of the tumours was 7.4 cm. Four cases were in the suprasellar location and the rest in the parasellar location. Gross total resection was achieved in eight of 10 patients and subtotal resection in two. Preoperative hyperosmolar therapy was used in two cases. Six patients had recurrent disease at a mean interval of 27.7 months following primary surgery. Recurrences were more often seen in tumours with a maximal dimension of over 6 cm and with significant suprasellar extension. All patients with recurrences were treated with surgery with or without adjuvant therapy and are disease free at a mean follow-up of 47.7 months. Two patients died post-operatively (1 following bilateral pneumonectomy for massive pulmonary embolism and 1 following surgery for recurrence). The mainstay of management of gCPCs is surgical resection. There is no consensus on optimal adjuvant treatment, although a role for hyperosmolar therapy and radiation therapy cannot be excluded.
